Dear Friend,

Initially it started as one of those "nothing better to do" experiments. I figured if I can provide the visitors with the most relevant banner ads or text blocks "ala AdSense" style I will probably gain more revenue from each of my sites....

....and it did!

Then I thought if placing static advertisements on a web page can boost my income potential, then why not rotate each ad/banners/text block on every reload or when the visitor clicks through the links on the site. This is in the attempt to gain maximum exposure for my ads without over cluttering my web pages with unwanted ads. I manually coded the script using free resources so that I can rotate an ad block easily.....did it bring up profits up a notch?

...yes it did!

It's much simpler than you think. You just have to build a site for a particular niche, stuff it with Ads from your favorite relevant affiliate programs, market the site/s and you will see SOME profits coming in and an even easier way is to strategically place Google AdSense ad boxes on your web pages....at least that was what I did to earn a regular monthly revenue from sites I don't even monitor anymore.....

But The BIG problem is....

If you have tons of Ads you'd like to place on a page you might be getting into the problem of over cluttering your web pages and if you decide to cut down on your ads, you might lose on the top performing ones which might not get a decent number of views which equates to lesser clicks and an even lesser profit margin.

So you may have toyed over several methods of displaying as many ads on a single page without being obstructive to your visitors....and one of the best ways is to place rotating ads that changes every time it reloads.....but then again, if the visitor leaves the page without refreshing or navigating through your other pages, some of your Ads will lose view counts....

Then you continued on probing through some other methods which led may have led you to rotating Flash Ads or Gif images, this about solves the problem of not having ALL your relevant ads to have maximum exposure and view counts...but unfortunately it doesn't solve the problem of putting an Ad like that together.... :(

The cost and time to create such an Ad is a turn off....

What YOU need is a system that:

- Can rotate, most type of images, flash ads or even text ad boxes
- Refreshes itself automatically with an interval I can control
- Manages ALL ads for ANY of my websites so that I do not have to go through the hassle of installing it again for my other sites (one centralized ad management panel)
- Has a grouping scheme that allows me to manage my ads
- Does not need me to install any additional MySQL database...
- Allows me to add 10s' or 100s' of ads which rotates EVEN when the page is NOT refreshed
- Allows me to check the statistics of each ad and see the ads that are performing better than others
- Automatically expire ad blocks or leave it to run forever
