Dear Friend,

As your business expands, which is a good thing, you know the greatest challenge is not traffic, search engine optimization or anything else at this current moment.

It is to find people who are willing to perform the menial and mundane tasks that you don't want to face because your focus is on building your own business...not wasting time on the menial.

Ask yourself this though – If your business has just taken off, are you willing to sacrifice a little bit of cash to invest in building yourself a stable, solid team of part time employees? If your answer is No, consider this:

Your business expands and money flows in. But you'll have to keep on updating your blogs and search for new content to do so.

- When it comes to writing you sales letters, you struggle and waste a whole day to do when an experienced copywriter could settle within 3-4 hours.

- You spend a week or 2 attempting to create your new product, build up the squeeze pages, sales letter, back end pages and loads more.

- Customers who have problems with your product or service take up tickets and wait for an eternity for you to solve their problems only to demand a refund in anger later.

- Slowly, bit by bit, your regular customers stop buying from you in frustration because your product and after-sales service dropped drastically.

Could all of this have been avoided? You bet!

You see, not only the gurus, but many seasoned marketers outsource the mundane and tedious tasks to experienced freelancers to handle. You're not talking just copy writing and web design, but even areas such as content creation, programming and more!

The problem is, where do you find affordable freelancers and how can you get the best deal out of them?

Well, that's not a problem, thanks to a unique guide I created specially to help novice marketers like yourself deal with such a pressing issue.
